

INSPIRATION

- [1] Video (8:34 min): Seven Keys to Good Storytelling | Josh Campbell | TEDxMemphis
- [2] Video (31:50 min): How to Speak Without Notes - The Ultraspeaking Podcast - Episode 3
- [3] Video (2:42 min): How to Tell Stories
- [4] Video (1:38 min): Build a Story with Scenes
- [5] Video (5:14 min): How to Make a Storyboard for a Video in 6 Steps | Video Marketing How-To
- [6] Example: Ignite Talks

CONSIDERATION CHECKLIST

- See what aspect of the online session appears very content-heavy and needs some light release.
- Find a story or case study that reinforces the purpose of the heavy content.
- If the learners only remember one thing from the story, what do you want them to remember? Focus on that one thing when choosing and crafting the story.
- Format the story or case study into a story. That means making it more relatable by having it focus on a protagonist.
- Use a storyboard to help you visualize the story (this is a tool for the moderator and shouldn't be presented in the session) [Inspiration: 4, 5]. You can base the visual aids you select for your presentation on these notes.