REASON FOR TODAY'S CALL:

I'm having a problem with my faucet in the kitchen which was installed a year or two ago. It has a very small stream of water coming out of it when it's on and it would be appreciated if it could be tended too. The lock ring which is under the sink which keeps it in place is loose too and it's very floppy.

DESCRIPTION OF WORK PERFORMED:

-The nut that secures the faucet in place has 2 set screws that tighten into it and help mitigate the chances of it loosening. Both of these screws had fallen off and a part of the plastic connector cracked. I found one of the screws in the corner of the cabinet but the other could not be found. I resecured the faucet in place using this one screw to help hold the nut in place. If the faucet loosens up again it will have to be replaced. -The low water pressure was caused by debris in the spray hose. I removed this debris and tested by running the faucet for 5 minutes. The pressure is back to normal and no leaks present.
